Ernest L. Thurston, assistant superintendent in charge of white schools, is preparing to visit the school buildings in order to determine just what repairs are needed and what replacements of furniture are required. This work will include repairs to desks, floors, ceilings, blackboards and roofs. More than 100 buildings will be inspect ed by Mr. Thurston. He will be assisted to some extent by John A. Chamberlain, director of manual training in the schools, and Hugh F. McQueeny, superintendent From eight to ten buildings a day will be inspected until this work is complete. Requests for repairs have been sent in by the respective buildings, but as these always ask for more than it is possible to give an examination will be made to determine just what repairs are most Outing at Marshall Hall Attended

LORD LONGBOW --- HE REACHES THE MAGNETIC POLE.

Some of the fastest traveling I ever accomplished was once when I wanted to get to the magnetic pole. A wireless told me of approaching high winds, so making a couple of igloos I had them frozen togethaw, with me inside.

"The magnetic currents were strong, and me pocket magnet kept me from turning ovah and ovah as the ball spun and helped the wind draw me to the pole. "I arrived with great speed over several hundred miles of ice, and as the currents all center there the ball stopped, and I heard voices about me.

"I had landed in a camp of nomad Lapps, and they chopped me out and feasted me on ragout of reindeer, old chap. I then looked up the discoverer's records, and believe him to be fully three inches out of the way in his calculations, old top."
